Historical or Associative Value

The existence of a purpose-built commercial building from 1847 in close to original condition makes this building historically significant not only to the Village of Glen Williams but to the Town of Halton Hills (Township of Esquesing) as a whole. Its unique preservation may extend far beyond our municipal boundaries as well.

The well-documented association of this building with the scion of the Eaton dynasty – Timothy – make it very significant as the first place of employment for a new immigrant who went on to establish a national commercial reputation. It is also associated albeit legally, with the nationally well known firm of Burrow, Stewart and Milne of Hamilton, Ontario.

Contextual Value

This store and house has been a landmark on the corner of Main and Prince Streets for the majority of the history of this village. The one and a half storey store with the classic Victorian front show windows defines the historic character of the village core since it is the oldest building built for that purpose. The adjoining Laidlaw house dominates the corner, more so because of its simple lines and typical English front garden contained by the picket fence.

Both of these buildings are reflective of the type once commonly found throughout small towns and villages of this province. The Frazier Shop is an excellent preserved example of an early Victorian commercial building once common throughout Canada West. Its very appearance makes it attractive to a tourist and its historical associations enhance the attraction. Designation would encourage preservation of their unique features and continued restoration. It will also enhance the entire village of Glen Williams, maintaining the historic core of the village.
